

Congress of the United States

House of Representatives

Washington, DC 20515

1700

October 15, 2009

The Honorable Julius Genachowski
Chairman
Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street SW
Washington, D.C. 20554

Dear Chairman Genachowski:

We write to express both our hopes and concerns related to current and upcoming Commission proceedings focused on the deployment and use of broadband networks.

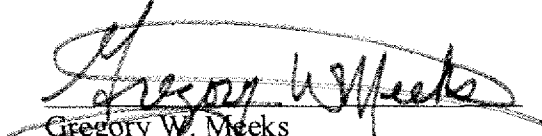

We applaud the Commission's effort to gather information about broadband and its recognition of the significant progress achieved to date, progress that is a direct result of policies that have encouraged competition and private investment and relied on the exercise of regulatory restraint. A decade ago, broadband was a nascent service, and only one percent of U.S. households connected to the Internet through broadband lines; today by contrast, roughly two-thirds of Americans connect through high-speed connections that are available to ninety-five percent of households. While we have further to go as a nation in extending the benefits of broadband to all, it is our strong belief that continued progress in expanding the reach and capabilities of broadband networks will require the Commission to reiterate, and not repudiate, its historic commitment to competition, private investment and a restrained regulatory approach.

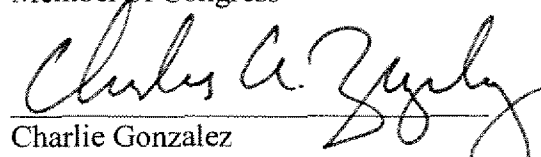

As the FCC embarks on its much anticipated rulemaking addressing the subject of "net neutrality," we therefore urge the Commission to carefully consider the full range of potential consequences that government action may have on network investment. We are confident that an objective review of the facts will reveal the critical role that competition and private investment have played -- and of necessity will continue to play -- in building robust broadband networks that are safe, secure and open. In light of the growth and innovation in new applications that the current regime has enabled, as compared to the limited evidence demonstrating any tangible harm, we would urge you to avoid tentative conclusions which favor government regulation.

Like you, we believe in a transparent, data-driven process and stand ready to work with you on measures that will spur adoption and expand the use of broadband networks. But we remain suspicious of conclusions based on slogans rather than substance and of policies that restrict and inhibit the very innovation and growth that we all seek to achieve.

Thank you for this opportunity to share our views.

Sincerely,

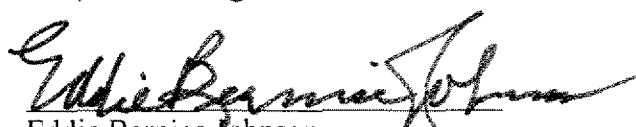

Gregory W. Meeks
Member of Congress

Charlie Gonzalez
Member of Congress

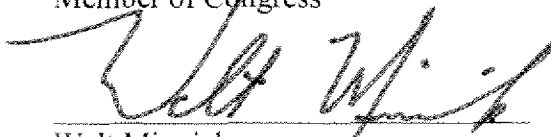

John Tanner
Member of Congress

Michael McMahon
Member of Congress

Ed Towns
Member of Congress

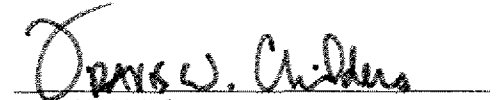

Eddie Bernice Johnson
Member of Congress

John Barrow
Member of Congress

Walt Minnick
Member of Congress

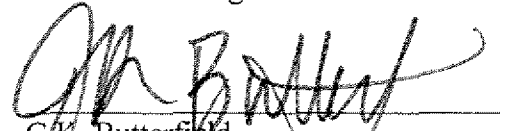

Joseph Crowley
Member of Congress

Gene Green
Member of Congress

Travis Childers
Member of Congress

Loretta Sanchez
Member of Congress

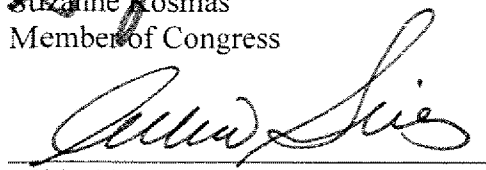

Chaka Fattah
Member of Congress

G.K. Butterfield
Member of Congress

Alcee L. Hastings
Member of Congress

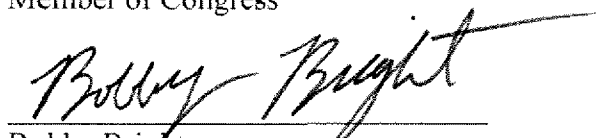

Dan Boren
Member of Congress

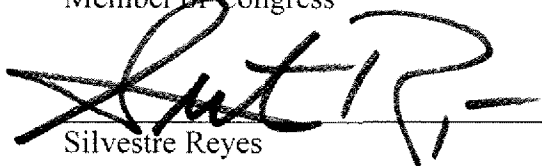

Suzanne Kosmas
Member of Congress

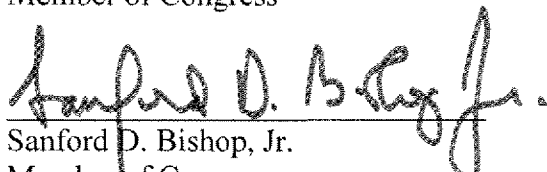

Albio Sires
Member of Congress

Joe Baca
Member of Congress

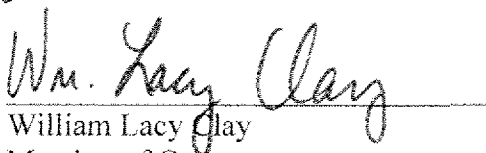

Henry Cueller
Member of Congress

Bobby Bright
Member of Congress

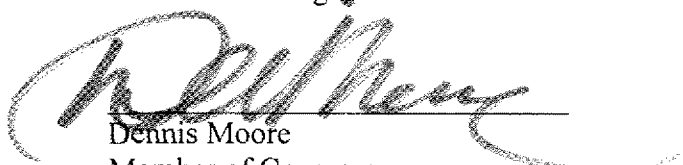

Silvestre Reyes
Member of Congress

Sanford D. Bishop, Jr.
Member of Congress

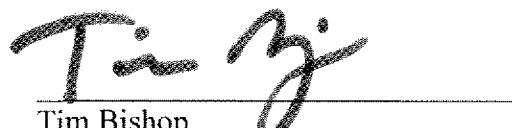

Lincoln Davis
Members of Congress

William Lacy Clay
Member of Congress

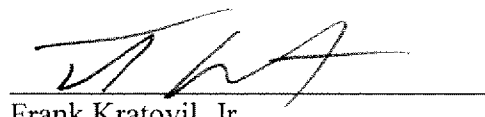

Tim Holden
Member of Congress

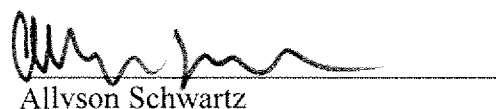

Dennis Moore
Member of Congress

Solomon Ortiz
Member of Congress

Tim Bishop
Member of Congress

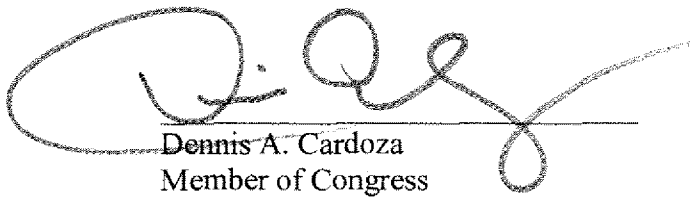

Russ Carnahan
Member of Congress

Frank Kratovil, Jr.
Member of Congress

Allyson Schwartz
Member of Congress

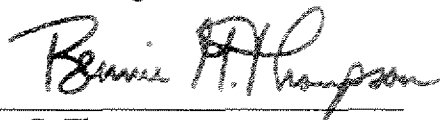

Allen Boyd
Member of Congress

Hank Johnson
Member of Congress

Dennis A. Cardoza
Member of Congress

David Scott
Member of Congress

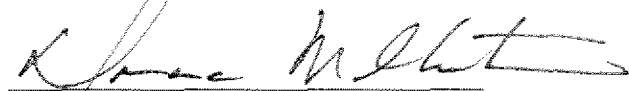

Bennie G. Thompson
Member of Congress

Baron P. Hill
Member of Congress

Parker Griffith
Member of Congress

Donna M. Christensen
Member of Congress

Bill Foster
Member of Congress

Daniel B. Maffei
Member of Congress

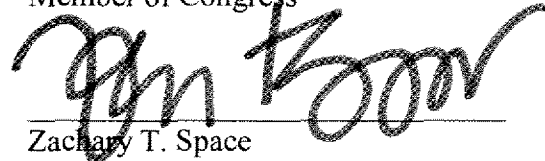

Elijah E. Cummings
Member of Congress

Paul Tonko
Member of Congress

Ed Perlmutter
Member of Congress

Zachary T. Space
Member of Congress

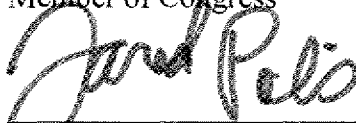

Robert A. Brady
Member of Congress

Debbie L. Halvorson
Member of Congress

Charlie A. Wilson
Member of Congress

Jared Polis
Member of Congress

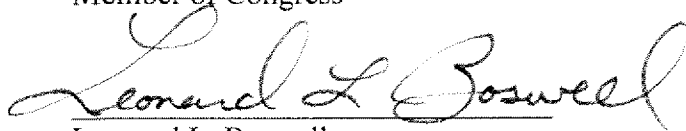

Steve Driehaus
Member of Congress

Kathleen A. Dahlkemper
Member of Congress

Marcia L. Fudge
Member of Congress

Leonard L. Boswell
Member of Congress

Sheila Jackson-Lee
Member of Congress

Charlie Melancon
Member of Congress

Michael Michaud
Member of Congress

Kurt Schrader
Member of Congress

Danny K. Davis
Member of Congress

Glenn Nye
Member of Congress

Rick Larsen
Member of Congress

Jim Costa
Member of Congress

Mike Ross
Member of Congress

John Spratt, Jr.
Member of Congress

Peter Welch
Member of Congress

Al Green
Member of Congress

Ed Pastor
Member of Congress

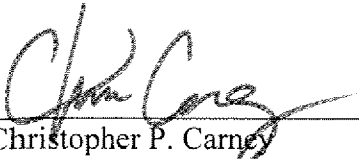

Michael Arcuri
Member of Congress

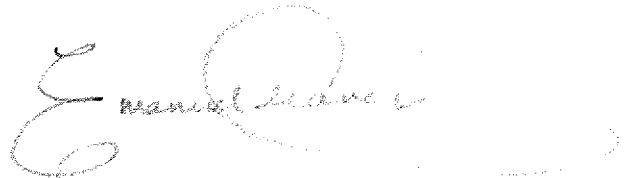

Heath Shuler
Member of Congress

Nick Rahall
Member of Congress

Christopher P. Carney
Member of Congress

Emanuel Cleaver
Member of Congress

CC: Commissioner Michael J. Copps
Commissioner Mignon Clyburn
Commissioner Robert M. McDowell
Commissioner Meredith Attwell

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Suzanne Kosmas
U.S. House of Representatives
238 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congresswoman Kosmas:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Henry C. "Hank" Johnson
U.S. House of Representatives
1133 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Johnson:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Eddie Bernice Johnson
U.S. House of Representatives
1511 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congresswoman Johnson:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Sheila Jackson Lee
U.S. House of Representatives
2160 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congresswoman Jackson Lee:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "J. Genachowski", with a long horizontal stroke extending to the right.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Tim Holden
U.S. House of Representatives
2417 Rayburn House Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Holden:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Baron P. Hill
U.S. House of Representatives
223 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Hill:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Alcee L. Hastings
U.S. House of Representatives
2353 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Hastings:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", is written over a horizontal line. The signature is stylized with a large, sweeping initial "J".

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Debbie Halvorson
U.S. House of Representatives
1541 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Halvorson:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Parker Griffith
U.S. House of Representatives
417 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Griffith:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Gene Green
U.S. House of Representatives
2372 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Green:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Al Green
U.S. House of Representatives
236 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Green:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski".
Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Charles A. Gonzalez
U.S. House of Representatives
303 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Gonzalez:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Marcia L. Fudge
U.S. House of Representatives
1513 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congresswoman Fudge:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Bill Foster
U.S. House of Representatives
1339 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Foster:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Chaka Fattah
U.S. House of Representatives
2301 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Fattah:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Steve Driehaus
U.S. House of Representatives
408 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Driehaus:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Lincoln Davis
U.S. House of Representatives
410 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Davis:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Danny K. Davis
U.S. House of Representatives
2159 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Davis:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Kathy Dahlkemper
U.S. House of Representatives
516 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congresswoman Dahlkemper:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Elijah E. Cummings
U.S. House of Representatives
2235 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Cummings:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Henry Cuellar
U.S. House of Representatives
336 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Cuellar:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Joseph Crowley
U.S. House of Representatives
2404 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Crowley:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a long horizontal stroke extending to the right.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Jim Costa
U.S. House of Representatives
1314 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Costa:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Emanuel Cleaver
U.S. House of Representatives
1027 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Cleaver:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable William Lacy Clay
U.S. House of Representatives
2418 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Clay:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Donna M. Christensen
U.S. House of Representatives
1510 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congresswoman Christensen:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Travis Childers
U.S. House of Representatives
1708 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Childers:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Chris Carney
U.S. House of Representatives
416 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Carney:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Russ Carnahan
U.S. House of Representatives
1710 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Carnahan:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "J. Genachowski", is written over a horizontal line.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Dennis Cardoza
U.S. House of Representatives
1224 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Cardoza:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski".
Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable George K. Butterfield
U.S. House of Representatives
413 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Butterfield:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Bobby N. Bright
U.S. House of Representatives
1205 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Bright:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "J. Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Robert A. Brady
U.S. House of Representatives
206 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Brady:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", is written over a horizontal line. The signature is stylized with a large, sweeping initial "J".

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable F. Allen Boyd, Jr.
U.S. House of Representatives
1227 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Boyd:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Leonard Boswell
U.S. House of Representatives
1427 Longworth House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Boswell:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Dan Boren
U.S. House of Representatives
216 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Boren:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Sanford D. Bishop, Jr.
U.S. House of Representatives
2429 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Bishop:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Timothy H. Bishop
U.S. House of Representatives
306 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Bishop:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Julius Genachowski

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

March 3, 2010

The Honorable John Barrow
U.S. House of Representatives
213 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Barrow:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", with a long horizontal stroke extending to the right.

Julius Genachowski

OFFICE OF
THE CHAIRMAN

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON

March 3, 2010

The Honorable Joe Baca
U.S. House of Representatives
2245 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Baca:

I write to update you on the progress of our ongoing rulemaking to preserve the open Internet. Thank you for your letter expressing your thoughts about the Commission's launch of a participatory public process to develop commonsense rules of the road to preserve an open Internet. We share a common purpose in ensuring that the Internet remains an enduring engine for innovation, investment, economic growth, and the free flow of information. To this important end, you have my pledge to continue working with you and your staff in an ongoing, constructive dialogue with respect to this crucial infrastructure.

The Commission released its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) on preserving the open Internet on October 22, 2009. The NPRM launched a multi-month process, with the goals of safeguarding the free and open Internet, providing greater predictability for the marketplace, and fostering continued innovation and investment. The task of securing an open Internet deserves an open process. Accordingly, Commission staff are conducting a fact-based, transparent, and participatory process to develop rules based on a record that includes engineering and economic examinations.

The Commission has convened a group of technical advisory experts for ongoing input, and held a workshop in December on broadband network management. Over the last three months, the Commission also has held staff-level workshops on investment and innovation, on consumers and transparency, and on free speech and civic participation. Our process now is well underway, and we are encouraged by signs of growing common ground among the many stakeholders we have heard from.

I look forward to continuing a constructive dialogue with you on these issues. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Julius Genachowski", is written over a horizontal line.

Julius Genachowski